I don't run often but when I do, I run for JCRENTS

About Me

My name is Freddy Offereins, coming to you all the way from Co Kerry, a town called Kenmare, situated snugly between the Healy Raes and the mighty Brennan Brothers, safe to say I am At Your Service!

I'm just a girl who can be easily identified by my continuous urge to scream OH YAA or by the oversized speaker wheeling behind me everywhere I go...

Coming from a gap year which consisted of making cocktails in Cape Town, drinking them in Amsterdam and serving them all summer long in Kavos, I can provide a wide experience of partying from all around the globe.

As an Arts Block student, time isn't an issue baby...

PINKY PROMISE

I can't promise a tattoo, but I can promise a halls like never before.

A halls for halls, I promise to give the Halls residences more of a say, after all they are the ones all of this is for. After my participation with the JCRENTS committee I saw the importance of this highlighted. With more open forums, more Q&A's and more of a listening ear from your newest (and best) JCRENTS officer, halls will be more inclusive than ever.

A PERSONAL TOUCH

Some personal growth this year made me realise fun can be had without alcohol and drugs, a view I will promote using my platform. Let's shake things up with events that ditch the same old alcohol-fueled parties. Picture this: BYOB pool shindigs, Bingo Loco nights (not too Loco), dance battles, Céilí's and race days. Shifting the spotlight from solely club scenes. It's time to shake the view that a good time isn't just about the drinks, but the cool spot, the tunes, and the company!

Of course, for those who do like to get blocked and black out I am exploring more options in Dublin such as Farrier and Draper which provide a more exclusive and elegant feel to Dublins night life, but not forgetting to get down and dirty in Dtwo or Diceys... where our student budget is high on my agenda.

In Secondary school, I organised teen discos and assisted my dad with DJing events. I planned a remarkable TY Ball, became the student body president, and coordinated the debs with the committee, emphasizing teamwork making me ready to collaborate with the team of JCR officers to provide the best possible experiences.

I am interested in exploring diverse cultures and music to organise events featuring nicher music. I aim to involve residents in choosing their preferences and plan many more themed nights, with props and acts.

During my years of hospitality experience, I learned to prioritise safety and customer enjoyment in nightlife, ensuring they can have fun without concerns about their safety. Being one of those annoying little promoters in Kavos showed me what the people want!

My experience in halls has been amazing; I have made lifelong friends and memories, so thank you all! I aim to offer this experience to halls newest menaces. Freshers week is crucial to me for ensuring everyone feels comfortable, safe, and included.
